“What is brought inside is more protected than what’s outside.”
“Don’t throw away anything that serves as a memory.”

José Pacheco Pereira, on Ephemera

These two sentences express the essence of one of the missions of a museum like the one in Angra do Heroísmo. A museum is certainly a keeper of memories. It can do so both for the items it acquires and for those entrusted to its care, either through deposit or donation.

This is why we chose to hold this exhibition to celebrate the 75th anniversary of its creation (Decree-Law no. 37 of 30 March 1949). The exhibition aims to honour all those (individuals and institutions) who have donated to the Museum of Angra do Heroísmo over the years. Without these donations, the museum’s collection would clearly be much poorer. In fact, they represent a very substantial part of what constitutes the museum’s current wealth.

Many people wanted to entrust their material memories to the Museum of Angra do Heroísmo, due to the belief that this institution would preserve, conserve, study and pass them on to future generations.

In this exhibition, we will present just a small sample of the museum’s archive, made up of seventy-five pieces (one from each of the years). This sample is intended to be representative of the quantity and variety of pieces the museum houses, which are in the order of several thousand, and which have been incorporated into its collection over these 75 years.

If it was possible to buy objects in the past, it is now totally impossible, given the reduced financial resources that are made available to these institutions. Therefore, the Museum of Angra do Heroísmo is indebted to a large community of people and institutions who, fortunately, increasingly entrust it with items in their care. From items that at present seem to have no heritage value to those that, if sold at auction, could be worth many thousands of euros to their owners. Here, all objects are welcome. What matters is not about their value in terms of financial transactions, but the memory they contain.

As far as we’re concerned, there couldn’t be a better way to celebrate the 75th anniversary of the Museum of Angra do Heroísmo than by honouring all of its benevolent donors who enrich its day-to-day.

He had a dream
in which he saw a stairway resting on the earth, with its top reaching heaven (...).

Genesis, 28:12.

The Directorate General for Higher Education and Arts believed that numerous objects of artistic, historical, ethnographic, and numismatic value in the district of Angra do Heroísmo were at serious risk of disappearing or being destroyed. It determined that they should be collected, used and exhibited as a matter of urgency so that they could be transformed into efficient instruments of culture. The birth of the city's regional museum was thus decreed by law on 30 March 1949.

Faithful to the stipulations, the institution has housed within it species of the most diverse and varied types which has allowed for a continuous growth that, over seventy-five years, has led to its organisation evolving into an ever-increasing number of Collections - or, as internally established: Conservation Units - as diverse as African, Archaeology, Decorative and Ornamental Arts, Fine Arts, Toys and Games, Science and Technology, Graphic Documents, Stone Species, Ethnography, Phaleristics, Musical Instruments, Medals, Memorabilia, Collecting and Miniatures, Militaria and Armament, Numismatics and Notaphilia, Nautic and Aeronautics, Transport and Accessories, Textiles and Military Uniforms and Accessories.

Honouring the agreement, the museum acquired found pieces, some transferred, others deposited or bequeathed, and others bought or donated into its estate, at an average rate of 3 per month or 680 per year, totalling 51,000 to date. Since there are other legally categorised types of incorporation, of the ones listed above and practised by the institution, it is donation that overtakes the others by 59%. However, donations can be volatile, for example, if in 1951 or 1959 only one piece was donated, in 2022 and 2023 they reached well over 2,000. This was the result of wills manifesting through the act of donating: 720 private individuals and 113 institutions, plus 29 who preferred to remain anonymous.

To echo the museum's first director Manuel Coelho Baptista de Lima: this museum continues to be gifted [...] pieces of various natures and origins [...], which clearly demonstrates the affection and interest that this establishment has earned not only from the population of this island but also from other people who, although living in other lands, wish to co-operate in its enhancement and enrichment.

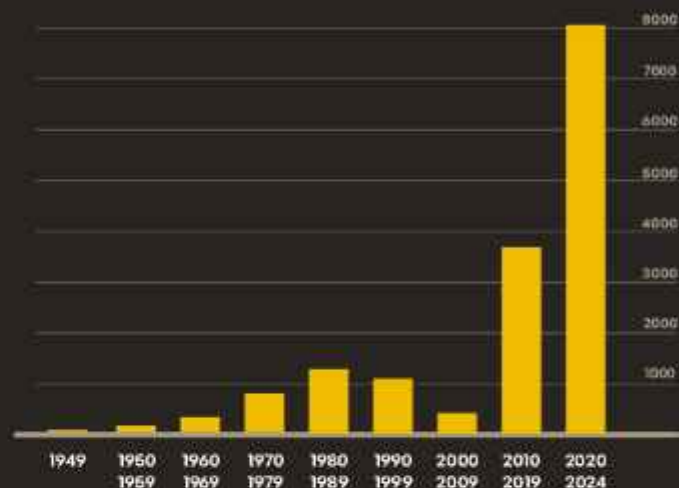

Since populations are but the combination of communities based on a concept in which their identity is defined by a population cluster which is recognised and acknowledged through collective belonging. They are founded on historical territories, economic systems, and specific mass public cultures, which find their structural link in memories and myths. In times gone by, it was only etymologically used towards what was considered worthy of offering to the divine. Therefore, because the gesture of donating still has symbolic power, museums, which act as the secular priests of the Titaness Mnemosyne and of her daughters, the Muses, labour to rescue, safeguard and enhance the community's memory as heritage workers.

Stairs, however infinite, are built step by step. Thus, the success of a museum is also measured by its donors, who, with each singular piece, have built it, are building it and will build it, and so edify the utopia of the collective.

Because it exceeds what was determined, the Museum of Angra do Heroísmo, in a bond that is reflected in the donations and has been built and strengthened with the community(ies), assumes itself and, above all, comes to be assumed and (re)known - by evoking, through the pieces, environments, spaces and experiences - as a guarantor of memories and, consequently, of stories.
